faculty

Matthew Beckmann (Ph.D., University of Michigan)
american politics, presidency, congress, interest groups, mass media

Graeme T. Boushey (Ph.D., University of Washington)
statewide elections, American politics, policy-making, ballot measures

Daniel R. Brunstetter (Ph.D., UC Davis) political theory, just war, early modern thought, otherness/identity, montaigne, rousseau

Simone Chambers (Ph.D., Columbia University) political philosophy, ethics, democratic theory, constitutional theory

Louis DeSipio (Ph.D., University of Texas)
ethnic politics, latino politics, immigration, naturalization, u.s. electoral politics

Sarah Goodman (Ph.D., Georgetown University)
comparative politics, immigration, integration, citizenship

Bernard Grofman (Ph.D., University of Chicago) models of collective decision making, empirical democratic theory, race and politics, public choice

Heidi Hardt (Ph.D., Grad Institute of International & Development Studies, Geneva)
international organizations and conflict management; european, transatlantic and african politics

Marek Kaminski (Ph.D., University of Maryland)
voting models, democratization, electoral laws

Claire Kim (Ph.D., Yale University)
race and ethnicity, social movements, immigration

Jeffrey Kopstein (Ph.D., UC Berkeley)
western europe, interethnic violence, voting patterns of minority groups

Ines Levin (Ph.D., California Institute of Technology)
elections, voting, statistics

Erin Lockwood (Ph.D., Northwestern University)
financial derivatives, financial regulation, international political economy, political theory, risk and uncertainty

Cecelia Lynch (Ph.D., Columbia University)
international organization and law, international ethics and political philosophy, social movements and religion, peace and security

Mary McThomas (Ph.D., UCLA)
immigration, theories of citizenship, feminist political theory, gender and politics

Kristen Monroe (Ph.D., University of Chicago)
altruism and moral choice, political psychology, gender equality

Kevin Olson (Ph.D., Northwestern University) political theory, legal theory, history of political thought

Mark Petracca (Ph.D., University of Chicago)
american political institutions, state and local politics, interest organizations, constitutional reform, public policy, law

Davin Phoenix (Ph.D., University of Michigan)
race, political motivation, representation, and mobilization

Shawn Rosenberg (M.Litt., University of Oxford) political psychology, deliberative democracy, ideology, social theory, social and development psychology

Kamal Sadiq (Ph.D., University of Chicago)
international relations theory, migration, citizenship

Caesar Sereseres (Ph.D., UC Riverside)
u.s. foreign policy, u.s.-latin american relations, mexican-american politics

Charles (Tony) Smith (Ph.D., UC San Diego)
law and legal institutions, comparative and international law

Etel Solingen (Ph.D., UCLA)
international relations theory, international political economy, international cooperation, regional conflict and cooperation

Dorothy Solinger (emerita, Ph.D., Stanford University) chinese domestic politics and political economy, comparative politics, east asian politics

Rein Taagepera (emeritus, Ph.D., University of Delaware) quantitatively predictive logical models; electoral and party systems; finno-ugric area studies

Michael Tesler (Ph.D., UCLA)
race and ethnic politics, political attitudes and behaviors

Keith Topper (Ph.D., UCLA)
modern and contemporary political theory, philosophy of science and social science, democratic and liberal theory

Carole Uhlaner (Ph.D., Harvard University)
comparative political behavior, formal theory/social choice

Robert Uriu (Ph.D., Columbia University)
international relations, international political economy, international politics of east asia, u.s. foreign policy

Martin Wattenberg (Ph.D., University of Michigan) american and comparative political behavior

political science graduate program

UCI School of Social Sciences

#24

best political science program in the U.S.
-U.S. News & World Report

01 university doing most
for the American dream
-New York Times College Access Index

08
"coolest school"
-Sierra Club Magazine

09
public university in the U.S.
-U.S. News & World Report

uci political science

A top 25-ranked program with research strengths in American and comparative politics, international relations, and political theory (↑) UCI political scientist Heidi Hardt is leading an international team of academic, military and policy research leaders to increase gender awareness at NATO.

psdept@uci.edu | 949.824.5361

www.polisci.uci.edu

Considering a graduate degree in political science?

Consider UCI.

Ranked #24 among all political science programs in the country (U.S. News & World Report), the UCI graduate program in political science offers students six years of guaranteed funding. Scholars in the department have a proven track record of earning competitive research funding and fellowships from agencies including the National Science Foundation and the Henry Luce Foundation, and from campus-level fellowships, such as the Public Impact, Fletcher Jones and Chancellor's Club fellowships.

UCI political science faculty publish regularly in top academic journals, and graduate students have ample opportunities to publish alongside them. Faculty and graduate students consistently present research at conferences, universities, and before governmental entities across the globe. Their expert advice is sought by journalists in the national media, lawyers, and policy makers. Members of the faculty have received national and international awards and testified before Congress to impact policy.

And if that wasn't enough, the UCI campus is the #9 ranked public university in the U.S. (U.S. News & World Report) and the #1 university doing the most for the American dream

(New York Times College Access Index).

UCI has a pleasant physical climate, too, located about five miles from Newport Beach.

UCI political scientists explore changing notions of citizenship, strategies aimed at halting nuclear proliferation, impacts of redistricting and voter mobilization on elections and public policy, and contested notions of democracy.

Students select a primary field from among American politics, comparative politics, international relations, or political theory. They select a secondary field from these or from a more specialized area. Examples of secondary fields include critical theory, democracy studies, ethics, methodology and modeling, political economy, political psychology, public law, race ethnicity and politics, among others. Faculty actively mentor doctoral students and encourage them to become productive, publishing scholars before completing their graduate studies. Students have an opportunity to earn a master's degree while in pursuit of their Ph.D., and are encouraged to enroll in interdisciplinary coursework.

Alumni have entered tenure-track positions at top research universities, highly competitive post-doctoral positions, and research-oriented jobs in both the public and private sectors.

A quick sampling of recent placements:

- Arizona State University
- California Polytechnic University
- Department of Defense
- Gallup
- Georgetown
- Tufts
- UCLA
- University of Washington
- U.S. Census Bureau
- Wellesley College

If full funding, opportunities to publish, and a proven track record of excellence in the field are what you're looking for in a graduate program, contact us today to learn more about UCI political science.

Jeffrey Kopstein, Department Chair
kopstein@uci.edu | 949.824.4012

Carole Uhlaner, Graduate Admissions Director
cuhlaner@uci.edu | 949.824.7329

Kevin Olson, Graduate Director
kevin.olson@uci.edu | 949.824.8335

John Sommerhauser, Graduate Advisor
jdsommer@uci.edu | 949.824.4074

Department of Political Science
psdept@uci.edu | 949.824.5361